A FLIGHT FROM GOLD

Twenty tons of gold were flown into London from the continent one day last week. Some of it came from Holland, but most of it came from France.

Britain's "managers" pounds evidently look like a safe and profitable investment just now to the holders of France's gold francs and Holland's guilder. They are not, however, without doubt that they could manage their own currencies without keeping these hitherto securely held gold. ### NOT INTERESTED

With all the talk at Ottawa about investigation, nobody has yet proposed to investigate the latest, and apparently the worst, episode in the stirring drama of the exploitation of the Beauharnois project.

Local merchants on one end of the Beauharnois project are not interested in the latest, and apparently the worst, episode in the stirring drama of the exploitation of the Beauharnois project. ### shade from the "sound" money policy it talks about but will not practice.

The world economic conference decided that 25 per cent of a sufficient gold coverage for currency. With the output of gold for the present year in hand, the Dominion Government could issue $400,000,000 of new currency, use $100,000,000 of it to pay for the gold and spend $300,000,000 in paying wages to men employed in the construction of public works.

Canada should get the advantage of the opportunity that offers to use this $300,000,000 of interest-free money. It does not have to be borrowed in a national construction program. Our unemployed men need the wages. The country is in the work. Business needs the added circulation of money and turn-over of goods. Industry needs the stimulation that would come with growing demand for its products. Producers and wage-earners need the upward influence that would be exerted on prices and wages by the increase in the money supply.

The taxpayers would neither have to pay back the $300,000,000 nor pay interest for the use of the money.

The Passing Show

The British Columbia lumber manufacturers are giving their employees a 10 per cent wage increase. This will be the second 10 per cent wage increase in less than eight months. In normal times the payroll of the lumber industry in B. C. is over $25,000,000. The increase will set a sizeable volume of money in circulation.

Treatment of Rupture

By DOCTOR FRANK MCCOY

If the hernia has not progressed too far, there is a possibility of a cure through first, the development of the abdominal muscles and at the same time, a reduction of the internal pressure.

As soon as a hernia sac begins to show itself either by symptoms of pain or through being felt with the fingers, it is wise for the patient to take measures to prevent a cure rupture support or truss and wear it constantly until he is assured by his doctor that the cure is complete.

The next thing to do is to start developing the abdominal muscles through taking a careful course of "setting-up" exercises.

Dr. F. McCoy exercises. All of those exercises taken while lying on the back will be helpful. I will be glad to send you the exercises if you will write to me asking for them and will enclose a large, self-addressed envelope and 6c in return.

These exercises must be taken very carefully at first and used at least twice daily, gradually increasing the exercises until the patient is able to do them as the strength of the abdominal muscles permits.

At the same time as the patient is applied to the exercises, the patient should use only one quart of plain water each time. The enema should be taken in the knee-chest position or while lying on the left side. These enemas should be continued for several weeks or even several months if necessary.

It is a good plan to take at least one enema each day and perhaps better to take two, one in the morning and one in the evening, using only one quart of plain water each time. The enema should be taken in the knee-chest position or while lying on the left side. These enemas should be continued for several weeks or even several months if necessary.

Some of them are determined to reduce, often do things that hinder, rather than aid, the effectiveness of the reducing course they are following. They acquired mistaken ideas on the subject of weight reduction. And the consequences of these mistaken impressions is that water is fattening, and that reduction can be effected merely by abstaining from this liquid.

No woman ever should limit her daily intake of water when attempting to reduce her weight. For the consumption of large quantities of water is not only permissible, but is absolutely necessary when an individual is attempting to reduce. When the fat reserve in the muscles is broken up and oxidized, poisonous wastes remain. And sufficient water must then be consumed to dissolve those wastes stagnating in the tissues, and to sweep the system clean of all the poisons that have accumulated.

And reducing routine in which the water supply is so limited that the tissues shrivel and shrink, is a

There may, indeed, be a noticeable loss of weight as a result. But any such loss generally proves only temporary. For those thirsting tissues will absorb water like sponges at the first opportunity that presents itself, and the weight that was lost will quickly be regained. In my opinion, a well-planned dieting and exercising routine, such as the one in my "New Figure" booklet, is safest and best for bringing about a permanent reduction in weight and for keeping the figure lithe and

War's Infinite Woe in Official Photographs

Death pursuing even the wounded, ruin and wreckage the only spectacle for millions of men, mud, misery and despair the working conditions for the flower of mankind, are the subjects of the Canadian Official War Photographs in this newspaper. We are publishing the full story of the war in pictures by arrangement with the Canadian Government.

THE PANOPLY OF WAR—After Vimy, there were many battles down in the plain of Arleux, Avion and Metincourt. On a light railway, constructed immediately after the big battle, the wounded are being drawn out by horse cars. Under the tracks, a signal sergeant tends his wires. In the background is the famous Ridge and the ruins, probably, of Neuville St. Vaast. All this storied ground was dark with French blood, because, two years before the Battle of Vimy, the French 10th Army, under the command of Foch, stormed La Targette, Neuville St. Vaast, Carency and Loos and left 35,000 French dead on the battlefield. That was back in the days when the French wore dark-blue uniforms and battles consisted of mass attacks and charges with the bayonet.

OUTWARD BOUND—A man of the 4th C. M. R. coming out of the line from Vimy. Mud caked, weary, headed for a chill tent for a home. Pictures like this are not used for recruiting posters by any nation. But in each filth and corruption the modern soldier lives day and night for three weeks at a time.

The Chastisement of Our Peace is Upon Them

THE ORIGINALS WILL REMEMBER BEDFORD HOUSE AT YPRES—Even in the minds of old soldiers themselves these lingers the notion that staff officers lived in chateaux amidst crystal chandeliers and pianos. Bedford House, shown above, was brigade headquarters on the Ypres front for many a Canadian unit. Its cellars, those gaping elephant iron bunk holes, were the scenes of splendor amidst which red-tailed staff officers did their best to run the show according to some plan.

GRAVES WERE ALWAYS WAITING AT THE HOSPITALS—The Canadian field hospital at Doullens had a vast graveyard beside it to receive those who, after the long miles of walking or being carried out of the battlefield, and the long ride in an ambulance across shell-pocked roads, could bear no more mortal pain when they reached the first hospital, but went on to join the majority. We do not know why some had flags and others had only blankets.

MOTHER KILLED—And this wee baby, in the mother's arms, was wounded near Mons by a shell on the last day of the war. A Canadian gunner fondles the little one.

The Toll of the Somme and of Passchendaele

AS IT LEAVES ME IN THE PINK—Dear ladies, do you remember those cocky letters you used to get from your boy overseas in which he assured you it was a picnic? Well, here is a Canadian in the middle of a picnic, writing a reassuring letter home. If you said it was something else than a picnic, the censors cut it out with scissors.

MAGNIFICENT GAINS ON THE SOMME—At 6.20 o'clock in the morning of September 15, 1916, the Canadians attacked this spot and took it. It is just a small bit of the Sugar Refinery sector. Stalking tigers in the jungle is not more deadly than advancing over such ground. These Germans lying so still had Mausers and Maxims and bombs and bayonets.

PASSCHENDAELE WAS A QUAGMIRE OF DEATH—No better picture of Passchendaele exists. First, the mud that dragged like quicksand. Those little stumps sticking up are wooden posts the Germans drove into the swamp to try and sting barbed-wire entanglements. The two tanks are charred shells only, because direct hits turned them into gasoline-fed infernos. A big shell bursts on what appears to be an uninhabited morass. Are there any men in the morass? Aye, 48,000 Canadian infantry and 20,000 Canadian gunners.

Shopworn Bargains From the Factory of Krupp!

TROPHIES FROM THE BATTLE OF CAMBRAI—The German artillery lost hundreds of guns as the late September, 1918, days wore on and the Canadian Corps hurled itself out from Arras, past Boulton Woods, and lay siege to the city of Cambrai. Across wide flat plains, the German gunners slammed these field guns, howitzers and even the little trench mortars, but in those days, the Canadians had two Lewis guns to every platoon. And no horses, no men, could get their guns away for those bumble-bees swarming around them.

HOW D'YOU FEEL, MAC?—Men of the Third Canadian Division wounded and carried back to the main dressing station in the Amiens battle. Each platoon of 36 men had one of those men with the red cross on his arm. Great lad he was, too, as a rule.

GENERAL D. C. DRAPER—Famous Canadian soldier, with his staff, who commanded the 8th Brigade, the first to enter Cambrai, which the Germans left in flames.

Ranger Pivot Ace Gets Second Slot As Primeau Sighs

Charlie Conacher Still in Top Berth But Has

Owing to illness. The absence of action for several games due to illness, Joe Primeau, centre of the Saginaw, was expected to yield second place in the National Hockey League scoring statistics to Frank Boucher, New York Ranger. Primeau's coach, Charlie Coacher of the Leafs, said that Primeau's injuries held points but still leads the league with 30 goals and 30 assists and 60 points. Next comes Bobby Orr, Boston, with 29 points and 30 assists. Primeau is expected to lead the league with 60 points.

A shift in alignment of runners-up in the United States division of the NHL was expected as the Ranger forward running one-point lead over the New York Ranger, Cecil Dillon, who has 6-24, just naming his Stewart of Boston and Paul Thompson, Michigan, as his two players.

JACKSON SOLD

While his pals of the "kid line" were pointlessly Harvey Jackson of the Leafs securing four contracts, he made his position as third man in the section firm with 17-14-31. COMBIE, Princeton, was the best, thus holding the three first spots in the section.

Another player to grab four points during the week was little "Rabbit" McVeigh of New York City, who was also in the top position in the Canadian division.

fourth place with 10 points each.

Kit Klein, Buffalo, led women's senior curlers with 10-10-20. Lela Brooks, Toronto, was runner-up with 20.

The second half of the meet will be run off tonight.
